

Connectivity

Transcript:

Multiple cyberattacks have been reported over the last few years, and automotive OEMs now take this very seriously. Even Google's autonomous car and Mobility division is concerned. Many have started to include intrusion detection and prevention systems that constantly monitor the data, which is being exchanged between the outside world and the car's internal electrical and electronic systems.